SATAN TAKES A HOLIDAY

Formed in 2006, by fellow Rock'n Rollers Big Fred, Grizzly Turner and Schwartz, Satan Takes A Holiday is one ambitious rockband. Aiming to establish themselves in both the obscurity of the shadiest of punk-rock scenes as well as in the limelight of the commercial radio, the band sets out to fill the ever-growing void in Rock'n Roll that was previously so full of life during the glory-days of bands like The Sonics, Johnny Kidd and The Pirates and Link Wray.

The band wrote songs for a year with no pretensions, just this one goal in mind. Like Big Fred puts it; "not here to join the party, here to pick a fight". The songwriting culminated in what ended up being the self-titled debut album "Satan Takes A Holiday", released through somewhat legendary indie-label I Made This.

The album is best described as a juggernaut; an energetic, addictive and rumbling tour de force of pure rock'n roll, divided into 13 hard-hitting tracks. What sets STAH apart from many of their peers is the fact that even though they stay true to the guidelines of the genre, the album is also attractive to a larger audience.

STAH has already managed to be nominated to Swedens biggest award, namely Swedish National Radios award for "Best Rock/Metal Album", and the reviews have confirmed that this was a just selection. Acclaimed as a extraordinary live band, STAH is now preparing to support the album by touring.

– Nominated to "Best Rock Album of 2009" by Swedish National Radio P3.

"Satan Takes A Holiday is looking for the holy graal of Rock" – Nöjesguiden

"On this debut-album they deliver a complete Rock-explosion" – V.Götlands Dagblad

"I got totally run over! This trio is loading up with alarming sounds from the underground" – Norran

"This machine is glowing, without even one weak link" – Swedens music industry online.

"Without a doubt, the best swedish debut album this year." – Slavestate Magazine
